

● ART OF THE DEAL: Sarah Lyon is constantly reselling old pieces of furniture and buying new ones on Craigslist. “I feel like a space is never truly ‘done,’” she says. She scored the orange cane love seat at the Georgetown Flea, where she negotiated the price down to $55.

AN EXPOSED-BRICK LOFT IN DUPONT CIRCLE

Sarah Lyon and her roommate love their Dupont apartment, which is close to Metro, bars, shops, and restaurants. Lyon, who works in higher education, has outfitted her lofted bedroom with tons of Craigslist and flea-market finds, and she’s constantly rearranging the furniture.

Favorite piece: The orange cane love seat Lyon found at the Georgetown Flea Market. She normally isn’t drawn to the citrusy shade, but she’s a big fan of cane furniture, and the upholstery was in good condition, so she went for it: “I now love the pop of color it adds to my upstairs nook, and the piece is the perfect size for the space.”

Favorite home stores: Craigslist and Miss Pixie’s on 14th Street, which she stops into nearly every week. “I love the thrill of the hunt, and Miss Pixie’s is kind of like a real-life Craigslist,” says Lyon. “It’s perfect for finding furniture and accessories that you won’t find in every other home in DC.”

► Find more of Look Inside My Home on Washingtonian.com, where it’s a regular feature.

PHOTOGRAPH BY HEATHER BIEN